VOTED AT LAST ELECTION.

Cornelius Doremus, president of the Germania Life Insurance Company, was the next witness. He said that the company was a stock organization, and identified a copy of the charter and by-laws presented by Mr. Hughes. Under the charter of the company the policyholders have a vote for each $100 of reserve held on their policies at the annual election of directors, but figures show that few of them exercise the right. At the last election, out of about 65,000 policyholders 13,000 voted. Mr. Doremus testified that his company had made no political contribution whatever.

The amount of insurance in force in the Germania is $110,000,000 life and $380,000 industrial. The latter class of business has been discontinued.

The surplus of the company has shown a constant increase, being at present $4,744,717.

The assets of the company are about $35,000,000, of which $19,000,000 is invested in mortgages and loans, $10,000,000 in securities and the balance in real estate—New York Wall Street Journal, December 21, 1905.

We expect to pay more money for these shoes in the future, and therefore will have to charge more, but in this shipment we have nearly every style of Walkover that is made and will sell them at the old price, which is absolutely the best value the world produces.
